

Personal Profile and test results

Profile:

I am a first year uni student. I was born in Australia and am of Asian and African ethnicity. The eldest of six children and one of twins, I was homeschooled through high school. In between looking after my younger sibs and uni, I enjoy maths, music (I sing and play the piano) and mobile gaming.

Test Results:

The results from a Myers-Briggs test through 16 Personalities, it concluded that I am an entertainer.

This means, according to them, that I will be good with doing group projects because I can express my excitement, I am also good at being observant and down-to-earth. Also it says that I value emotional expressions and sensitivity, I am self-confident and I can adapt to opportunities.

The results from the online test by Education Planner concluded that I am an Auditory/tactile learner.

This means, according to them, that I learn easier through Listening to my teammates and to do my part straight after. I can remember things through listening and remember the project parts have been done rather than it being done in the process.

The results from a DISC test through 123test, it concluded that I am rounded as a compliant person.

This means, according to them, that I am conscientious, diligent and pay attention to details. This can help the team with editing the errors in programs or finding out what is missing or should be added in the project. It also gave career options through the answers i put in and it gave me a Technical Writer, a Software Engineer, Mechanical Engineer or an Architect.
